

Discord Bot

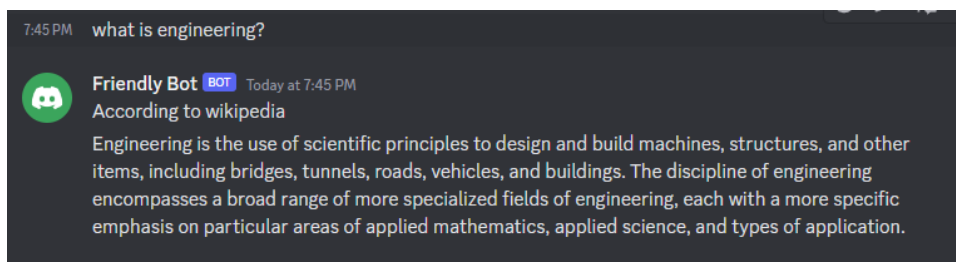

Discord channels and telegram groups are major forms of communication when communication between a large set of people is involved. These are not only used for unofficial communication but are also used for official communication these days.

Having said that it would be really difficult for admins to manage all the users by answering all of their queries as they could be repetitive (most common queries)

Hence to reduce the effort of the managers or the admins it would be helpful if they find an alternative to answer those kind of queries

A Bot can act as the best solution in this case

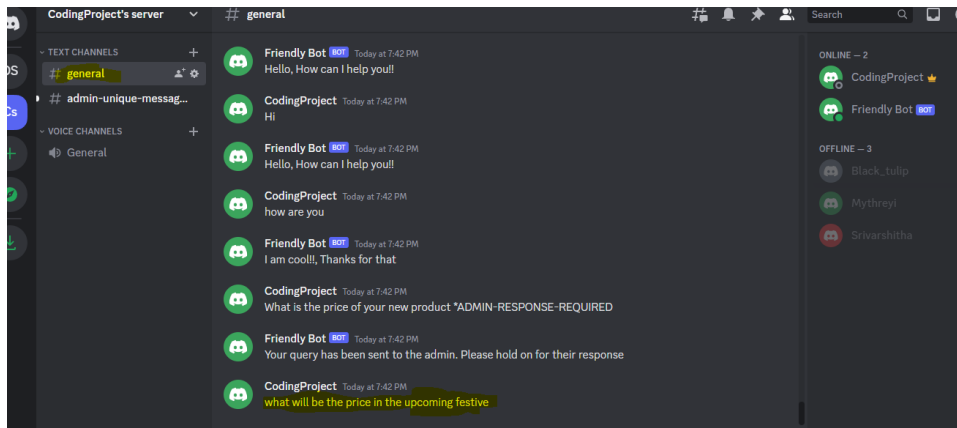

It can be basically used for answering frequent questions,

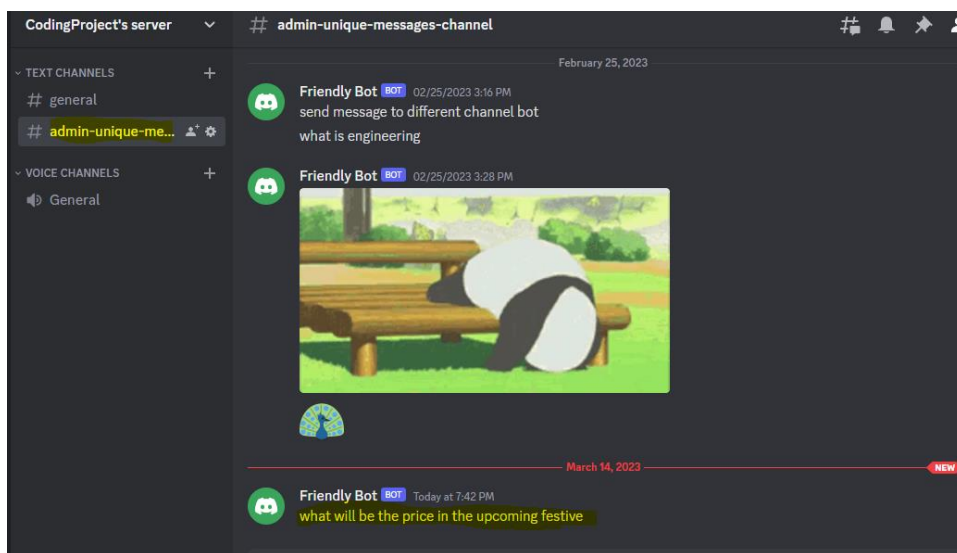

Frequent and Answerable features include:

- . Greetings
- . Time
- . Queries from wikipedia

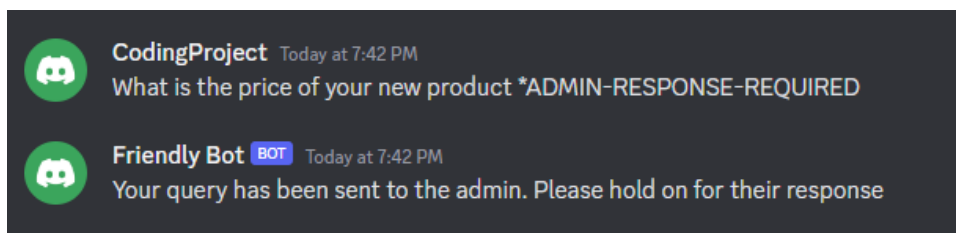

but if there is something important and totally new then the bot adds all the messages into a separate space where admin answers whenever he is free

The message is passed to another channel

If a user requires an immediate response for an entirely different question, then the bot can send a mail to the admin regarding that. (In this case the user can enter a specific command at the end of the message something like [#ADMIN-RESPONSE-REQUIRED])
